ABOUT THE ARTIST

MY STORY

I am a natural history illustrator from the Rocky Mountain west who now can be found exploring the tidepools and cliffsides of Oregon, gathering inspiration and making artwork about our fellow species and how to be better neighbors with them. My goal is to use artwork to engage people in learning about what's going on in the natural world and what we can do to protect it by using my artwork to communicate the beauty and charm of the unique plants and animals that surround us.

To date I have illustrated seven books including "BirdNote," "Northwest Know-How: Trees," and the "Little Book of Natural Wonders" series by Sasquatch Books. I have also created artwork for High Country News, Hawkwatch International, and the National Museum of Wildlife Art.

ETHOS & MATERIALS

My greeting cards are printed and sustainably packaged in Eugene, Oregon. I prioritize regional production and small businesses in the making of all of my products: my stickers are made by a small business in Oregon, my bandanas are screen printed in California, and all of my products in my line are manufactured by small businesses with stakes in their local communities.

Sustainability is a high priority in my material choices. I use 100% post-consumer waste recycled paper, recycled envelopes, and compostable cellophane sleeves for my cards. My bandanas are cotton with waterbase ink screenprints. It is important to me to work with materials that are recycled or reclaimed, break down easily, or (in the case of stickers) are high quality and durable enough to last a very long time.
